- As we prepare for Thanksgiving, it would be good to read the words of the Pilgrim governor William Bradford, who wrote:

One must also consider what weak hopes of supply and help they left behind them, which could have encouraged them in this sad situation and help them with the trials that they were under. It is indeed true that their brethren at Leyden had a strong and cordial affection and love towards them, but they had little power to help them, or themselves. What could now sustain them but the Spirit of God and his grace? May not and ought not the children of these fathers rightly say, "Our fathers were Englishmen who came over this great ocean, and they were ready to perish in this wilderness. But they cried to the Lord, and he heard their voice, and looked on their adversity. Let them therefore praise the Lord, because he is good, and his mercy endures forever. Yea, let those who have been redeemed by the Lord show how he has delivered them from the hand of the oppressor. When they wandered in the desert and found no city to dwell in, they were both hungry and thirsty, and their souls were overwhelmed. Let them acknowledge the Lord's loving-kindness before him, and his wonderful works before men."
